Hi,

Every known addiction is caused by a substance. The substance we want to talk about here is processed food. Those who manufacture and produce processed food do so knowing that they offer a highly addictive product to a largely ignorant public.

For other dangerous addictions – with the exception of alcohol and smokers addiction. Those who manufacture and promote them are considered criminals. But in the case of processed food, alcohol and tobacco, where the damage is equally dangerous and deadly, The law does not seem to apply.

These are the three most powerful, influential industries in the world. Apparently the wheels of commerce and industry depend on them. This gives them a free card, as governments and regulators turn a blind eye to the fact that in the case of processed food, it is as addictive as cocaine.

Yet these very industries promote foods for weight loss, and have successfully caused epidemics in obesity, alcoholism, and lung cancer. Who pays the bill for that? We do – the tax payers. Processed food is addictive. It causes various food addictions, particularly sugar addiction.

Food that are addictive make us fat. Ultimately they kill people. How? You may ask: In the case of food addiction: through obesity, diabetes type 2, heart disease, colon and bowel cancer. The tobacco industry has claimed their right to lung cancer.

Being nothing but producers and pushers of deadly addictions may be a deserving label to these industries. The tobacco and alcohol industries have been forced to accept it. But it is one the food industry cannot afford to be tagged with. At least not till they get us all addicted.

The food industry is your most dangerous enemy. They have in-house 'labs' devoted to keeping you addicted and in the dark. They have unlimited advertising budgets ready to lure you back. They are experts at getting to your kids addicted. They even expect you to help them.
